

LINDA R. KING • FINE ART PHOTOGRAPHER

Linda R. King is a native Floridian with strong family ties to wildlife conservation, leading to a greater appreciation for the beauty of nature throughout the country and particularly Florida's natural resources. Linda's appreciation for nature and landscape fine art was strongly influenced through her late brother John C. Jones, a leading conservationist who spent most of his life advocating preservation issues such as Big Cypress National Preserve, the Kissimmee River Restoration Act, and so much more.

By trade Linda is a self-educated graphic artist and web designer who has come to pursue photography and fine art as a natural extension of her design and photo retouching business. Linda broadened her photographic skills throughout the past decade when asked by clients to photograph product, portrait, and other mediums in conjunction with design related jobs, all merging into her appreciation for fine art.

Linda specializes in various forms of digital fine art, meticulously combining years of traditional Photoshop skills with a keen eye for detail and a heart to inspire. With a love for people and nature, Linda hopes to inspire and convey her life message through each project.
